Work or lose job, air controllers told

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today gave striking air traffic controllers 48 hours to return to work or be fired.

"I must tell those who failed to report for duty this morning they are in violation of the law, and if they don't report for work within 48 hours, they have forfeited their jobs and will be terminated," Reagan told a Rose Garden briefing this morning.

Reagan's announcement came at the same time the Federal Aviation Administration grounded much of the nation's commercial air traffic as the controllers, in defiance of a federal judge, launched their first nationwide strike.

The walkout began with the day shift at 7 a.m. local time, and the FAA said early indications were that more controllers were staying off their jobs at some centers than had been anticipated while in other areas some controllers were defying the strike.

No figures were available.

Reagan told reporters that federal law prohibits federal employees from striking and that air controllers promised not to strike when they were hired.

"I hope you'll emphasize again the possibility of termination, because I believe that there are a great many of those people who have been swept up in this and probably have not really considered the fact that they have taken an oath, the fact that this is now in violation of the law.

"I hope they will remove themselves from the law-breaker situation by returning to their posts."

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, who also briefed reporters, said the government will not offer the controllers any more money.

"We do not plan to increase our offer to the union,"

he said.

Reagan said the threat to fire the controllers was the only action open to him.

"What lesser action can there be?" he asked. "The law is very explicit. They are violating the law."

Reagan and Lewis spoke after a mid-morning White House meeting also attended by Attorney General William French Smith.

Lewis said beforehand that the government would not try to put controllers in jail, but would seek civil penalties and ask to have the union removed as the controllers' bargaining agent.

Meanwhile, U.S. District Judge Julie Green ordered the union and its leaders to tell the court by 5 p.m. why they should not be held in contempt of court for disobeying her order that made the strike illegal.

Green, at the pre-dawn hearing, also granted the government's request to bar the union from paying any benefits from its strike fund to the controllers.

Lewis has said no talks would be held as long as there was a strike and a federal mediator said earlier that no new negotiations were on tap.

The FAA said it was telling the nation's airlines to ground half their flights at 23 major airports as of 11 a.m. EDT, but was leaving it up to the airlines to decide which flights to cancel.

Government attorney Dennis Linder told the pre-dawn hearing a strike would pose "truly a threat to the health and welfare of the United States" and cause a widespread impact on the economy amounting to millions of dollars a day.

But Polk, asked whether he would ignore the order, told reporters: "I've said that before. Yes, I will."

Check ahead, Tri-City air travelers warned

It was business as usual for Republic Airlines today at the Tri-Cities Airport, with all morning flights departing on schedule despite the nationwide air traffic controllers strike.

But Cascade Airways flights from Richland and Pasco were canceled, with limited service to resume either this afternoon or Tuesday morning.

Max Andrus, station manager for Republic, said his airline's flights out of Pasco airport should continue on schedule Tuesday as well.

"The carrier has been ordered to cut flights by 50 percent," Andrus said. "But that shouldn't affect us here. We should be able to run a good, clean schedule out of Pasco if we can get the planes in."

Mark Trout, station manager for Cascade, said the commuter airline canceled all flights until it could determine how badly today's strike would disrupt service on main-line connecting flights.

Both Andrus and Trout reported many cancellations as air travelers opted to drive or stay home. And both recommended that those who must fly come to the airport to see what flights are scheduled. Phone lines to reservation agents have been jammed since late Sunday afternoon.

Kermit Borden, chief of tower operations for the Federal Aviation Administration at Pasco, where nine air traffic controllers are assigned, said management personnel will keep the tower open from 6 a.m. until 10 p.m. daily.

Borden said the two controllers who were to report to work at 6 a.m.

today did not show.

"We don't know if the swing shift is going to show up," Borden said.

Norm Sack, president of the Local 394 Professional Air Traffic Controllers Union at the Tri-Cities Airport, said he did not know if any of the local controllers would work during the strike.

"The way things are going right now, I just can't say," Sack said. "I'll tell you we are scared. Everybody is scared."

"We have the Department of Justice and the FAA coming down on us. They don't want to deal. They just want to break the union."

Sack said the controllers were prepared for the strike and have even been versed on what to do if arrested or fired.

He said opposition to the contract was solid.

"The contract we were supposed to have ratified was worse than the contract we have now," he said.

Andrus said Republic's late-afternoon and evening flights will be advised of the air traffic conditions by ground crew workers with two-way radios.

"We did that for years before the tower was built and it works very well," Andrus said. "As a matter of fact, we remote in our two terminating flights (late night flights that come in after the FAA tower closes at 10 p.m.) now anyway."

Andrus said he expected all of Republic's nine flights to continue to operate out of Pasco, though that could change.

Don Mill, finance director for Cascade in Spokane, said during the strike he expected the airline to operate about 30 to 40 percent of its flights when service resumes. Those would mainly be to Seattle, Portland and Spokane, he said.

Jim Morasch, Pasco airport manager, said passenger volume at the terminal has been very light and most have been understanding.

"As long as the weather is good, we will have a lot less trouble," Morasch said. "So far we have had no major problems. It's early though."

Patrons and employees of three East Pasco houses raided by police early Sunday wait in a corner of the front yard to be questioned.

Brady has seizure

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House press secretary James S. Brady, who was shot in the head when President Reagan was wounded March 30, had a major seizure in his hospital room today, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes announced.

Richard Ellis, a public relations representative at the hospital, described the seizure as a "sudden loss of consciousness immediately followed by a generalized convulsion."

He said the cause was unknown and that such a seizure was not uncommon following brain injuries. He said the impact on Brady could not yet be assessed.

"It can be very serious or not serious at all," Ellis said. "They are still evaluating how it is affecting Mr. Brady."

Speakes said the seizure, known as a "grand mal seizure," was treated with intravenous medication and anesthesia. Ellis said the anesthesia was being given as a relaxant.

A White House announcement said that Brady's vital signs were normal and that he was sleeping under anesthesia in a post-anesthesia recovery room at the George Washington University Hospital.

quit, she had worked for the Community Action Committee, as planner and equal opportunity officer.

Warrants had been issued before the raid for 13 people. Eleven were arrested and two remained at large.

Few of the police officers participating in the operation knew their real assignment when they reported to the Benton County Public Utility District auditorium at 10 p.m. Saturday.

When they arrived, however, Franklin County Undersheriff Cliff White outlined plans for the raid. The men were briefed for three hours behind closed doors on details of the operation.

Eleven police cars and vans, including a mobile jail and mobile crime lab, plus three light trucks accompanied the houses in caravan style.

12 jailed as Tri-City vice sweep nets 88

Twelve persons were arrested and another 76 rounded up as material witnesses early Sunday as 70 police surrounded three East Pasco houses in what officers are calling the largest vice raid in Tri-Cities history.

The raid, at about 2 a.m., ended a year-long investigation of prostitution, illegal gambling, drug and liquor violations at the houses at 403, 405 and 407 S. Cedar Ave. by the Pasco Police Department and Franklin County Sheriff's Department.

They were aided by officers from the Kennewick and Richland police departments, Benton County Sheriff's Department and Washington State Patrol.

Arrested and held on $500,000 bail was Humphrey Ross, 57, of 407 S. Cedar, owner of the three houses. He was charged with professional gambling, prostitution in the second degree, permitting prostitution, conspiring to permit prostitution and selling alcoholic beverages without a license.

Dori Shirley, 52, of 500 N. 24th Ave., Pasco, was held on $100,000 bail and charged with promoting prostitution in the second degree, conspiring to promote prostitution, professional gambling and selling alcoholic beverages without a license.

Katherine Smith, 26, of 308 S. Elm Ave., Pasco, was held on $25,000 bond and charged with professional gambling, promoting prostitution in the second degree, conspiracy to promote prostitution and selling alcoholic beverages without a license.

Zebadee Mathews, 25, of 1300 N. 24th Ave., Pasco, was also held on $25,000 bond and charged with professional gambling, promoting prostitution in the second degree and conspiracy to promote prostitution.

Amos Scott, 59, 1829 S. Alton Ave., Pasco, and Irvin Cliff Shannon, Moses Lake, were each held on $50,000 bond and charged with professional gambling.

Four Pasco women were held on $1,000 bond and charged with prostitution and conspiracy to promote prostitution. They are Cora Schroeder, 22, of 608 W. Yakima St.; Sara M. Roddy, 20, of 12325 S. Fourth Ave.; Bonnie Davis, age age available, 1300 N. 24th Ave.; and Myra L. Tate, 21, 404 N. Owens Ave.

Also arrested was Carlos M. Lozano, 23, Prosser, who was charged at the scene with carrying a concealed weapon.

Names of the material witnesses were not released by police by press time today.

Ross' arrest record in Pasco date back to 1959 when he was convicted of a gambling charge. He was convicted in 1972 of unlawful delivery of heroin and again in 1978 on two counts of unlawful delivery of controlled substances.

Ross also was instrumental in 1974 in helping police round up 19 drug dealers in the Pacific Northwest by acting as an informant.

Smith, who has no prior arrest record in Pasco, was an unsuccessful candidate for City Council in 1971 and 1975. Until April, when she

Mobil boosts offer

NEW YORK (AP) — Mobil Corp. today boosted its offer for Conoco Inc. to $8.5 billion in an effort to keep the bidding war for Conoco going until it can get government clearance to begin buying shares.

Mobil, locked in a war with Du Pont Co. and Seagram Co. Ltd. for control of the nation's ninth-largest oil company, said it would pay $115 a share in cash for 51 percent of the Conoco shares, up from $105 in its earlier offer.

Mobil did not change the "other part of its offer, providing for securities worth $85 a share for each remaining Conoco share. The old offer was worth $8.2 billion.

Warsaw streets clogged by hunger protesters

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — With horns blaring and headlights flashing, hundreds of buses, trucks and taxis clogged Warsaw streets today in an anti-hunger convoy. The protest underlined the urgency of talks on Poland's food crisis between the government and the Solidarity labor union.

Heavy police patrols monitored the routes snarled by about 80 buses, 80 to 90 heavy trucks and at least 300 taxis, which formed the noisiest caravan in the 10 a.m. — 4 a.m. EDT — demonstration.

Transport workers had promised to put "everything on wheels" in the streets of the capital at the start of a second week of protests over short supplies and rising prices. Many city buses still ran normal routes, however.

Police also formed a human blockade outside the Communist Party headquarters to prevent further caravans from passing, witnesses said.

"We're tired of the shortage of food, of fuel and of engine oil," said one protesting taxi driver.

Earlier, the Communist Party's ruling Politburo authorized special officials to supervise food sales, improve food distribution and crack down on waste, black marketing and mismanagement, the official Polish news agency PAP reported.

Solidarity, the Soviet bloc's only independent labor union, announced strike alerts and marches in several cities this week despite a Politburo warning that such demonstrations "create a great threat to the country."

Union leaders agreed to discuss the food crisis today with Rakowski, the government's labor trouble-shooter. The agreement reversed an earlier union decision to postpone the meeting indefinitely while it prepared a position.

Strike alerts also were announced for today in Piotrkow Trybunalski, south of the capital, and marches were planned in Wloclawek to the west. The local in Gdansk on the Baltic coast said it would meet Wednesday to discuss proposals for new protests, and a protest march was planned Thursday by Solidarity's Krakow chapter.

Political and military officials promised Sunday to launch a coordinated campaign in the spiraling food crisis that the government said was leading Poland to "catastrophe and calamity."

Poland's Military Council, led by Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, outlined "tasks for the military in the economy and for fighting speculation and other social destructive phenomena," PAP said.

The report said "a particular danger is created by street demonstrations" that place "unwarranted pressure on the authorities" and contribute to the country's "march toward catastrophe and calamity."

The 15-member Politburo, in its first statement on the food crisis since last month's party congress, said Saturday that tensions over food threatened to explode into nationwide conflict. It said the newly elected 200-member Central Committee would meet in its first crisis session "within days."

Police 'convention' precedes vice raid

12 arrested in vice raid

By KRISTI PHILIP
Special Staff Writer

It looked like a police convention outside the Benton County Public Utility District building late Saturday night.

Police cars and vans from six agencies lined the street and crowded into the parking lot. Some 70 officers, dressed in uniforms or SWAT team fatigues filed into the building for what they thought was a training exercise in crowd control.

What they didn't know was that three hours later they would be heading to Pasco's east side to pull off what officers called the biggest vice raid in Tri-City history.

Inside the PUD building they learned about their real mission from Franklin County Undersheriff Cliff White. He told the hand-picked team members, that they would encircle three houses where prostitution, drugs, illegal gambling and liquor sales were suspected to be going on.

It was the culmination of an intensive year-long investigation. Warrants were issued for 13 people including Humphrey Ross, Dorl Shirley and Kathryn Smith.

No one was allowed to enter or leave the PUD building during the three-hour briefing. While officers studied maps, charts, aerial photos and videotapes of the scene, Gretchen, a Yakima County narcotics unit dog slept at her handler's feet.

Undercover officers who had been in one of the houses earlier in the evening told the team what to expect when they arrived: a large crowd of men drinking, gambling and enjoying the company of several prostitutes. Cars were parked up and down the street in front of the houses. It was apparently business as usual at the establishment.

Another undercover report said several rifles and shotguns were kept in a closet at one of the houses.

"Use your common sense, good judgment and law enforcement experience in the use of force. We don't want anyone to get hurt on either side. You're all experienced officers or you wouldn't be here tonight," White said.

Franklin County deputies Jeffrey Reynolds, and Pat Palmer first arrested Ross and asked for his cooperation in searching the houses while other members of the team quickly began surrounding the three houses and detaining their patrons and employees.

Men and women were flushed out of the houses, handcuffed, searched and herded into the front yard of 405 S. Cedar Ave., as police made their way through each room. When the final tally was made, 77 persons had been questioned, photographed, named as material witnesses and released.

The house at 405 S. Cedar Ave. was used primarily for gambling and prostitution and also had a bar, said Vandiver. Most of the people were in that house.

The house at 403 S. Cedar Ave. was used primarily for prostitution, he said. The other house, at 407 S. Cedar Ave., is Ross's residence, where police hoped to confiscate more evidence.

Vandiver estimated about $5,000 a night changed hands just in gambling operations.

He said the three houses had been under surveillance for a year. Police had 18 hours of videotape, two boxes of cards listing license numbers of cars seen at the houses and reports of informants and undercover officers to aid the investigation.

One of those undercover agents was Officer John Saessman, a boyish-looking patrolman for a Western Washington police department. Saessman had made several trips to one of the houses to gamble, while his concealed microphone picked up information, Vandiver said.

Also participating Sunday were Deputy Bill Harris of the Yakima County Sheriff's Department and Gretchen, a German shepherd trained to sniff out narcotics. Harris and the dog went through each of the houses after the raid in a search for evidence.

Although police were prepared to handle violence, there was little resistance. No injuries were reported either to police or persons at the houses.

The men were deputized en masse as Franklin County special deputies and sent off with a prayer by Bruce Einspahr, Franklin County sheriff's chaplain.

They climbed into 11 police cars, trucks and vans, including a mobile jail and crime lab where clerks were ready to process paperwork for the at least 50 people expected to be at the houses.

The caravan moved from Kennewick to a spot on Highway 12 in Pasco where it waited with lights out for the first arrest to be made before officers moved in.

When word came that Humphrey Ross had been arrested and was cooperating with the officers, the rest of the team swooped into position around the houses. Lighting trucks with portable generators lit up the neighborhood as police moved into position around the houses and went inside.

Soon people began coming out of the house at 405 S. Cedar Ave., hands above their heads. They were searched, locked into plastic handcuffs and placed in a corner of the dusty yard next to a fence where police stood with shotguns.

People came out of the small house for nearly an hour. Some were drunk, some were embarrassed, some were angry. Some of the women laughed and chatted with the men in the yard as they knelt handcuffed in the dirt.

Only 12 of the 86 people at the houses were arrested. The other 74 were photographed, interviewed and released. They may be called as material witnesses.

It took three hours to process all of the people through the paperwork and to take their photos in the harsh light of the generator-powered light trucks. When it was over, the sun was coming up and a special breakfast was waiting at the Pasco Salvation Army Church for the officers.

During the night, police had seen their plan work almost perfectly. Their spirits were high as they moved through the last phases of the investigation. Most had never been involved in such a dramatic raid.

He said the three houses had been under surveillance for a year. Police had 18 hours of videotape, two boxes of cards listing license numbers of cars seen at the houses and reports of informants and undercover officers to aid the investigation.

One of those undercover agents was Officer John Saessman, a boyish-looking patrolman for a Western Washington police department. Saessman had made several trips to one of the houses to gamble, while his concealed microphone picked up information, Vandiver said.

22 men cited in prostitute roundup

Twenty-two men were issued citations accusing them of soliciting for prostitution following arrests Thursday and Friday nights in Pasco, police said today.

Iran president sworn in; Bonn embassy occupied

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Mohammad Ali Rajai took office today as Iran's new president, replacing the ousted Abolhasan Bani-Sadr, who said from his exile in Paris that he is counting on the military forces he once led to topple the Islamic regime.

Meanwhile, opponents of Iran's clerical regime forced their way into the Iranian Embassy in Bonn, West Germany today, breaking windows, damaging offices and injuring the ambassador in a brief scuffle, authorities said. West German police ejected the invaders.

Investigators found some bomb apparatus in a package at the embassy, but no explosives, said police spokesman Peter Doring. He said 10 people were slightly injured and 80 arrested when about 150 people, most of them expatriate Iranian students, burst into the embassy shortly after it opened.

During the takeover, a man claiming to be a spokesman for the demonstrators telephoned the Associated Press and said "the illegal hangman's regime of (Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini is at an end."

Rajai, a 48-year-old former high school mathematics teacher, was sworn in at an open Parliament session today attended by Chief Justice Ayatollah Abul-Karim Musavi Ardebil and the Council of Custodians, the official Paris news agency reported.

"Should you put a foot wrong, the very 13 million who voted for you would shoot. 'Death to you.' This is the nature of revolution," the news agency quoted Khomeini as telling Rajai at a confirmation ceremony Sunday.

The voting July 24 gave Rajai a landslide victory to take over the presidency, vacant since Bani-Sadr's impeachment in June. Rajai, backed by Islamic clerigymen and a long-time foe of Bani-Sadr, took 88 percent of the vote. There were three taken opponents.

But the fugitive ex-president charged Saturday that the election results were rigged and only 2.7 million of Iran's 23 million eligible voters went to the polls.

The Western-educated economist escaped to France from a hideout in Iran on Wednesday. Bani-Sadr was quoted as saying in an interview with the Sunday Times of London that he was counting on the armed forces which he led in battle against neighboring Iraq to "do their duty" and end Khomeini's rule.

Efforts to reach Bani-Sadr by phone for confirmation of the Sunday Times interview were unsuccessful and reporters were barred from his residence by French security forces.

The interview quoted Bani-Sadr as saying he would direct from his Paris refuge a campaign of nationwide strikes and protest marches in Iran against the fundamentalist regime. He predicted he would return to Iran within months.

On Sunday, France barred Bani-Sadr from making such public statements. He was granted political asylum on the condition that he not engage in political activities while on French soil.

Goof could cost $138 million

CLEVELAND (AP) — A mistake at the largest construction project ever attempted by the Air Force may cost $138 million to correct, according to a report in the Cleveland Plain Dealer on Sunday.

Brig. Gen. Clifton D. Wright testified about the error at House Appropriations subcommittee hearings in May and June, according to the Plain Dealer's copyright story.

Testimony showed that sophisticated jet test equipment made for the Aeropropulsion Systems Test Facility, being built seven miles southeast of Manchester, Tenn., would not fit into the facility.

Testimony showed that equipment such as compressors, drive motors and cooling pumps could not be installed because the pipes, ducts, and controls were not properly designed, the newspaper said.

Wright said the mistake would cost $138 million to fix.

The cost of the facility would be pushed to $575 million, 32 percent above original estimates, Wright said. The newspaper said that would be the largest cost overrun in the history of Pentagon construction projects.

The center, planned to be in operation by September 1985, has fallen nearly 15 months behind schedule.

Maj. Bob Carroll, an Air Force spokesman at the Pentagon said the test plant is the largest single construction project ever attempted by the Air Force.

Startled man dies in fall

NEW YORK (AP) — A 30-year-old Boston man fell to his death out of a third-story window trying to flee a burglar he thought was his lover's husband or boyfriend, police said.

The man was identified as Roy Howes.

The incident began early Sunday morning in a Brooklyn apartment, police said.

They said a burglar, believing no one was home, broke through the front door. A woman sleeping on a living room couch awoke and screamed, according to Detective Pat Nannery.

Nannery said the burglar went to the door of a bedroom in which a man and woman were in bed.

The couple and the interloper caught sight of each other. At that point, the man jumped out of bed, climbed out of the bedroom window and fell three stories.

Police found his body lying face up in the back yard of the apartment building.

The burglar escaped without taking anything.

"We're not treating this as a homicide," Nannery said. "Although, of course, it's up to the district attorney."

Boy drowns in Scootney Reservoir

A 16-year-old boy drowned Sunday at 2 p.m. in Scootney's Reservoir north of Pasco, a Franklin County Sheriff's spokesman said today.

Sgt. R.D. Courson said the youth's body has not been recovered from the lower end of the reservoir and the name was being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

The victim fell in, did not know how to swim, and went under, witnesses said.

Body of kidnap victim found

ROME (AP) — The bullet-riddled body of Red Brigades kidnap victim Roberto Peci, bearing a sign "Death to Traitors," was found Monday in a field on the outskirts of Rome, police said.

The 23-year-old Peci was kidnapped by the leftist urban terrorist 54 days ago as revenge against his brother, Patrizio, a former Red Brigades commander who turned informer.

Police discovered the body in a field near the Capannelle race track.
